

castle

A castle is a strong building. An important person such as a king or a ruler would have stayed there. They used the castle to keep themselves, their army and the people they ruled over, safe from attacks.

Photo courtesy of PhillipC (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

battlements

The battlements are the square shaped openings at the top of the castle walls. The openings were used to shoot out from and stand behind for protection.

Photo courtesy of bixentro (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

drawbridge

The drawbridge is lowered over the moat to allow people to get into the castle.

Photo courtesy of puroticorico (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

dungeon

A dungeon is a strong prison cell, which is normally underneath a castle.

Photo courtesy of quinet (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

great hall

The great hall would have been used to hold large feasts and banquets.

Photo courtesy of Dominic Mitchell (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

keep

The keep was a safe place within the castle where people could go if it came under attack.

Photo courtesy of Draco2008 (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

moat

A moat is a deep ditch that goes all the way around a castle. It could be filled with water. The moat makes it difficult for enemies to invade the castle.

Photo courtesy of Art History Images Holly Hayes (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

parapet

The parapet is a smaller wall behind the main castle wall, which knights could hide behind when the castle was being attacked.

Photo courtesy of Ell Brown (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

portcullis

The portcullis is a heavy metal grid which can be lowered over the entrance to the castle to stop people getting in easily.

Photo courtesy of exfordy (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

arrow slits

Arrow slits were used by knights to shoot out at their enemies. As the slits are long and slim, it makes it harder for enemies to shoot into them.

Photo courtesy of Athena's Pix (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

spiral staircase

A spiral staircase would usually be found inside a tower. These replaced ladders as the only way to climb to the top of the tower.

Photo courtesy of CustardCat (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

suit of armour

A knight normally wore a suit of armour. They used this to protect their bodies when fighting.

Photo courtesy of foshie (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

tower

The tower is useful as it can be used as a viewing point. Its height would make it perfect to see all round the castle. This way it would be easy to see enemies approaching.

Photo courtesy of Ell Brown (@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence - attribution

turrets

Turrets were often used in castles to make them look grand and attractive.

 $Photo \ courtesy \ of \ The Lizard Queen \ (@flickr.com) - granted \ under \ creative \ commons \ licence - attribution$

windows

Castles have very few windows at ground level or on the first floor. Lower windows were harder to defend and made it easier for enemies to gain entry.

Photo courtesy of Athena's Pix(@flickr.com) - granted under creative commons licence – attribution

